GENEVE

Domaine du CHAMBET, Gy

Anthony represents the third generation of the Fonjallaz family, which has been at the head of this estate for exactly 100 years. Adapted to organic and "natural" vinifications, he has launched a new range of "cuvées libres" which seduced us. Beautiful bottles from a promising winemaker.

VALAIS

CLEMENT MAGLIOCCO, St Pierre de Clages

The young Clément Magliocco cultivates 1/4 hectare (!) of magnificent organic vines on the heights of Chamoson and makes two or three micro-vintages in his garage. This leaves him time to work as an agro-technical collaborator specialized in organic viticulture at the Office de la Viticulture du Canton du Valais. The unusual journey of this endearing winegrower has encouraged us to offer his vintages, in order to encourage and accompany him in a process that must inevitably lead him to "natural" vinifications. The step was taken in 2021 with a very nice and fruity pinot noir.

ALSACE

Domaine JULIEN MEYER, Nothalten

Patrick Meyer, one of the "veterans" of natural wine, admirably masters his long vinifications without added sulphites. His wines are elegant and digestible, with great purity of taste, underpinned by a beautiful minerality. Remarkable choice of "vins de soif" (tasty blends from the last vintage) as well as "vins de terroir" (Alsatian grape varieties in an expression devoid of their varietal characters) with, as a bonus, superb "voile" and "orange" wines (macerated pinot gris, muscat and gewürztraminer).

Domaine EINHART, Rosenwillen

Another small vineyard that has been passed on harmoniously from generation to generation. The young Théo Einhart (22 years old) is breathing new life into this old family estate that his father Nicolas took over in 1990 and converted to organic and biodynamic practices. No effort is spared to produce healthy grapes that reflect the terroir (shell limestone, in particular) and allow for winemaking without any input. All the wines are produced by maceration, generally short; they are straight, lively and expressive.

BOURGOGNE

Domaine LES FAUVETTES

Mâconnais

Maryse CHATELIN, Uchizy

The wife of Alexandre Jouveaux is responsible for this beautiful Burgundy pinot noir. Its fruit, its tension and its silkiness simply deserve a little bottle ageing to express itself ideally. A very beautiful bottle, year after year. 2020 particularly successful.

BOURGOGNE

ALEXANDRE JOUVEAUX, Uchizy

Mâconnais

For thrill-seekers. Microscopic production, biodynamic, no added sulphites. The former photographer of Chanel admirably works his vines planted with old, even very old chardonnays in the Mâcon and Viré Clessé appellation area. The very type of a "living wine": far from certain flat and non-aromatic Burgundies, these wines are voluminous, complex and salty. Their tension and purity are reminiscent of the great wines of the Jura. The minerality speaks for itself!

AVIS DE TEMPÊTE

Raphaël Monnier et Marie Bourdon, Arc et Senans

2017: Following the frost, Raphaël had to make up for the lack of grapes and, with Marie Bourdon, launched a "négoce" activity. Organic grapes are harvested from friends in other regions and vinified in the Jura. Also in those wines, we find Raphaël's paw.

JURA

Domaine RATAPOIL, Raphaël Monnier

Arc et Senans

The former history and geography teacher now devotes all his time to his 4 hectares of organic land. In addition to the Ratapoil cuvée (a blend of Jura grape varieties that have almost disappeared), he produces all the grape varieties of the Jura: chardonnay, pinot noir, poulsard and trousseau. Work in the cellar is reduced to a minimum with little intervention. Native yeasts, of course, no filtration or fining. Sulphur in homeopathic doses. Straight and easy, straightforward wines, which benefit considerably from being a little expected.

Domaine LES BOTTES ROUGES,

Jean-Baptiste Ménigoz, Abergement le Petit

Wines of great joviality, in the image of their craftsman who (like his friend Raphaël Monnier) finally gave up teaching to take care of his 5 hectares of vines; five Jura grape varieties planted on varied soils (clay, marl, limestone) give a beautiful range of cuvées, finely elaborated by Jean-Ba and his associate Florian Kleine Snuverink. Their great drinkability does not exclude a real character and a good aptitude for ageing.

SAVOIE

COTEAUX DES GIRONDALES, Francis Rousset

Francis Rousset, a former bookseller, has set up a new and very promising estate (a new marriage between wine and letters in our portfolio, following that of Louis Pérot at L'Ostal Levant!), whose first wines date back to 2020. It was in 2016 (after a fair bit of travelling) that Francis began growing vines in Villaz, near Annecy, where there has long been a tradition of winegrowing. Here, on some 3 hectares, he cultivates 9 regional grape varieties organically, including Jacquère, Altesse, Gamaret and Mondeuse. His range is varied, with wines that are always straightforward and typical, easy to drink and often low in alcohol. If Europe is our country, then this is a winegrower from our district!

BUGEY

LES GRANGEONS DE L'ALBARINE

Luc Bauer

At the bottom of the Albarine valley, in the heart of Bugey, Luc Bauer practises "haute couture" viticulture (organic and biodynamic, of course) on some 3 hectares. He vinifies altesse, mondeuse, gamay and pinot noir in various containers (depending on the cuvées) without any inputs, except a mini dose of sulphites. And, after a long ageing process, bottles a series of beautiful lively wines characterized by their complexity and stability.

Laurent Fell, Sanilhac

Resolutely "organic", Laurent Fell, a "half-punk" "half-pekno" winegrower (according to his own words) produces, on the slopes of the Cévennes ardéchoises, some very pretty wines with Occitan names. His Gamay reveals a fine balance between tension and delicacy. Its whites, without heaviness, are simply amazing.

Domaine MONIER PERREOL Saint-Désirat

C.d.Rhône septentrionales

Beware, great St. Joseph! On an estate of barely 6 ha, planted with Syrah for the reds, Marsanne, Viognier and Roussanne for the whites, Jean-Pierre Monier (now joined by his sons) has been practising biodynamics since 1996 and produces some very remarkable Saint Joseph, not forgetting some lovely wines in the "Collines rhodaniennes" appellation. The high quality of the harvest allows for a gentle vinification, the very fine juices not suffering at all from a year spent in barrels and giving wines with a powerful, straight and firm body, which age admirably.

DOMAINE LEDOGAR, Corbières

The Ledogar brothers, members of the "Changer l'Aude en vin" wine growers' association, offer a range of whites, reds and rosés of constant quality over the course of very different vintages. The not very fertile soils of the young Corbières-Boutenac appellation favour the aromatic expression of the old Carignans. We will highlight "La Mariole" (value for money!), the sulphur-free cuvée (the other vintages have very little sulphur), "Tout Nature" (Carignan, Mourvèdre and Grenache), a deep, root wine, full of energy, as well as white wines of great character.

Mathias & Camille Marquet

By dint of hard work and questioning, Mathias and Camille Marquet show the mastery of the "old" that they are far from being already. Wines with a high emotional content: whites with a full texture and a whole range of reds, some with a very fine Loire finesse (La Plantureuse, for example), others (such as Racigas) more powerful, tannic and betraying their Bergerac terroir. Do not forget the "specialties" (sweet "sous voile" wines). Since 2017 (due to climatic conditions), a range of "vins de négoce" (out of organic grapes purchased from other friendly growers and vinified by Mathias) has been added under the Hors les murs label.

6 hectares, 6 grape varieties (melon de bourgogne, sauvignon, pinot gris, gamay, abouriou and cabernet franc) on the slopes of Ancenis, between Angers and Nantes) for Jacques Février and his partner Julie, passionate "nature" winemakers. We owe them a beautiful "Muscadet" (although the appellation is not applied for) and a gourmet and fruity Gamay.

VINILIBRE, Christophe Bosque

Christophe Bosque combines the activities of "négoce" with those of a winegrower on his 2 hectares of Muscadet vines. Above all, he is a passionate person, free to select, for his trade, the cuvées of already known winemakers or young talents to be discovered. Living soils, cultivation without synthetic molecules, respectful oenology with little or no inputs are absolute imperatives in his quest for pure vibrations and sensations.

René Mosse's pupil has obviously completed his learning process. On his estate of some 6 hectares planted with very old vines, his ambition is to make the simplest possible wines: no barrels, natural fruit, all dressed in a chosen way (even if he has recently abandoned the clear bottle), capsule instead of cork (because a little CO2, quickly dissipated for those it hinders, protects a wine without sulphites), minimalist labels, but an asserted identity. Its flagship cuvée, Rouge aux Lèvres (100% Grolleau) is a juicy wine that explodes with tart red fruits.

Le BATOSSAY Baptiste et Gaëlle Cousin

Baptiste Cousin makes wines of such authenticity that it is no insult to present him as the son of the remarkable and emblematic winemaker Olivier Cousin, known for the quality of his bottles and also for the well-publicized hassles that the administration has never ceased to cause him. In fact, Baptiste gradually took over his father's plots of land planted with chenin, grolleau and gamay. The latter, cultivated in certified organic farming, allows him to produce wines without added sulphites, unfiltered, unfined, pressed with his great-grandfather's vertical press, wines which, already in their youth, show real originality and good balance.

GUILLAUME NOIRE, LES ELEMENTS

Rablay sur Layon

"Apeasant approach based on respect for nature. Grapes and just grapes, grown without herbicides and pesticides, then vinified without any input other than SO2 in infinitesimal doses if necessary only." Such is the credo of this young winemaker who left the Parisian world of communication to acquire a few hectares in Anjou and made his first harvest in 2017. Guillaume plays with Mendeleev's table for his labels, but vinifies very seriously the beautiful, sincere and straight juices that make up his collection named "Elements".

He settled permanently in Le Thoureil in 2016, in the Caves de l'Abbaye, a semi-troglodyte cellar. After various experiences, notably in large Bordeaux structures, he met and worked with winemakers such as Xavier Cailleau, René Mosse, Mark Angeli and of course Olivier Cousin, which caused a clear evolution in his way to look at the vine and the wine. The farmer's side takes over, the work in organic is imposed with the will to make natural wines. Sylvain Martinez represents a significant addition to our already rich list of Loire winemakers.

CYRILLE SEVIN, Mont près Chambord

Cyrille, a discreet yet honest winegrower, has been established since 2007 with 10 hectares in the heart of the Cheverny (whose wines are always made from blends) and Cour-Cheverny appellations. He produces a wide range of wines: sweet and dry whites, reds, rosés, still and sparkling wines. He takes great care of his land, limits inputs, and harvests by hand. And in the cellar only indigenous yeasts are used and great care is taken during vinification and maturing. We offer a first selection of the wines of this former maths teacher, who succeeds in the (high-degree) equation between freshness and complexity, with whites of great finesse, reds that are spicy, but supple and not very tannic.

A very young estate, since Cédric Fleury's first vintage was 2017. After a career in NGOs devoted to humanitarian development, he was introduced to working in the vines at Renaud Guettier (La Grapperie) and then at Emile Hérédia (Domaine de Montrieux). 2.6 hectares of small plots on two historic hillsides in the Vendômois region are planted with pineau d'aunis, a nice grape variety that produces beautifully aromatic, supple and light-coloured wines, cabernet franc, pinot and, for the whites, chenin. Organic farming (certified) and non-interventionist vinification, carried out in a troglodyte cellar in Thoré la Rochette, in stainless steel vats for L'Appel du Large, and 13 months in barrels for Les Gueules Pressées.

EMILIE-ROMAGNE

CINQUE CAMPI Quattro Castelli

Like other wines that have fallen victim to their success, produced in industrial quantities and become rather anonymous products, Lambrusco deserved to be rehabilitated. The movement of "natural" wines and a winemaker such as Vanni Nizzoli take care of it for us. At the head of his 4 hectares of old vines grown organically near Reggio in Emilia, he produces half a dozen different vintages in an artisanal way, using indigenous yeasts and without adding sulfites. His entry-level Cinque Campi rosso frizzante makes you want to know the rest of his range.

Working century-old vines in Monteveglio, planted with cherry and other fruit trees, on hills surrounding Bologna and Modena, the young Jacopo Stigliano is one of the recent revelations of the Italian natural wine scene. Sailing against the tide, but reviving an ancient tradition, he blends in his "Buriana" vintage no less than 12 white grape varieties (8 days of maceration, aging 1/3 in amphora, 2/3 in concrete tanks) and 7 red grape varieties in "Lauv" (the wolf, in Bolognese dialect). Without added sulfites, the wines are neither filtered nor clarified. Highly personal wine, giving off a beautiful energy.

Antonio (Nino) Perrino has been making "garage wines" since 1961, long before the expression and the commercial use of these wines in the Bordeaux region started. For more than 60 years now (recently assisted by his niece) he has been cultivating his few hectares of vines in vertical rows above the sea in the region of Imperia, using organic methods, and vinifies, always without the use of technology, a tiny production (7 barrels in total!) in two vintages, one of macerated vermentino, the other of the magnificent local grape variety, Rossese, always vinified whole, of which he is undoubtedly the best producer.

The four plots, totalling some 2 hectares, are farmed organically and the grapes are harvested and vinified separately, without intervention and with minimal doses of sulphites, to produce Verdicchio of the highest quality. Cantina MARGÒ, Perugia

Carlo Tabarrini fulfils all the criteria of a true "natural" winegrower: a tiny estate of less than 2 hectares (located on marl near Perugia), work in the vineyard without the aid of chemicals (use of biodynamic preparations), vinification with indigenous yeasts, without inputs, with homeopathic doses of sulphites according to the year, no clarification or filtration. The red and rosé wines are produced from sangiovese, the whites from trebbiano and grechetto (maceration for a few days). The oak barrel is only used very wisely and for a small percentage of the juice of each cuvée.

Piedmont wines proposed at last! But, as always, off the beaten track, we have chosen a small estate to discover: 4 hectares in the heart of Monferrato (with a highly-rated 'agro-turismo'), mostly red clay soils on which the Barbera, Freisa, Pinot Noir, Riesling and Aleatico grape varieties are planted. Biodynamic since 2019, the estate vinifies using indigenous yeasts and non-invasive methods in amphora or large barrels, without fining or fermentation. VENETIE

COLETTI, Treviso

For 4 generations, the Coletti family has been running their estate in the historic Prosecco region, some 50 km north of Venice. However, it is only in recent years, under the impetus of Massimo, a fervent supporter of organic farming and trained as an oenologist, that the grapes are no longer delivered to the cooperatives, but are used to make the estate's own wines. The latter aim to recover the traditional Prosecco, as it was done before the internationalization of the wines, and the markets quickly recognized the quality work accomplished. This is a far cry from the "industrial" Prosecco with its coarse aromas and residual sugars that line the shelves of supermarkets. Very light bubbles and aromatic finesse distinguish the Prosecco Frizzante Phoja (ideal aperitif), while Via Larghe 01, Grigio or L'Innominato are close to a "pet nat", natural sparkling wine, with pre-fermentation, without disgorging or filtration.

WASENHAUS, Staufen

Christoph Wolben & Alexander Götze

Beware, rarity! On one and a half (!) hectares of old vines, Christoph and Alex, both of whom fell in love with Burgundy (they worked there with the greatest and Alex is still head of cultivation at Domaine de Montille), also show (after Enderle & Moll) that the pinot noirs from Baden can easily compete with their western neighbours. They are now in their fourth vintage and impress with wines of great finesse and elegance. Don't miss their Chasselas (Gutedel in German)!

MAX SEIN WEIN, Maximilian Baumann

Very young, Max discovered wine on the family estate in Dertingen in the north of Baden, on the borders of Franconia. After internships in New Zealand and with various Austrian winegrowers, he worked at the famous Gut Oggau. Since 2016, in a "nature" style stricto sensu, he has been creating his own cuvées on the family estate under the label of Max sein Wein. Very small production of a few thousand bottles.

ENDERLE & MOLL, Münchweier

Just two guys, a tiny cellar, a vertical press, a few hectares of old vines and a lot of "buzz". Even the venerable Jancis Robinson calls them "cult winemakers". Many think they make the best pinot noir in Germany. What is certain is that they work differently from practically all the winegrowers of Baden and the Palatinate, the large cooperatives, of course, but also from the reputable estates that swear by maturity, alcohol level and new wood. Their vineyards are among the oldest in the region. They are cultivated organically and biodynamically. All the work is manual. They use one to five year old barrels from Domaine Dujac in Burgundy. Available in numerous vintages, their wines are not lacking in power, but the energy they give off does not hide a satiny texture and a lot of brilliance. They do not copy Burgundy in any way, but share with it an ideal of finesse in the expression of the terroir. Astonishing rosé and white wines.

Michael Völker & Melanie Drese

On their 3 ha in the Würzburg region, these young winegrowers make fine wines, light in alcohol, not sulphited, unfiltered or fined, with great drinkability. Superb pinot noir, Sylvaner as well as macerated whites, but their emblematic cuvées are the "Fledermaus" (red and white), paying tribute to the species of grey bat that Michael and Melanie have undertaken to protect (these bats colonize the hovel surrounded by their "schwarzriesling" vines and, in exchange for their precious guano, a fund dedicated to their protection receives a few "cents" per bottle sold.

Weingut Christopher BARTH, Alzey

Following the sudden death of his winemaking uncle, Chris gave up his career in IT. Starting from scratch, he graduated from the renowned Geisenheim Wine University. By working organically and with non-interventionist vinification, he takes care of the vitality of his soils (5 ha) and the vivacity of his wines, characterized by their elegance and minerality. He is one of the winegrowers who give back his letters of nobility to the sylvaner.

Andi MANN, Eckelsheim

After studying economics, Andi went to Geisenheim (University of viticulture and oenology) before taking over the family estate which dates back to 1699. Of the eleven hectares, five are reserved for the production of natural wines. The wide variety of soils (including volcanic porphyry), the maintenance of biodiversity, the "clean" viticulture, the manual harvest, and the long and fundamentally non-interventionist vinification process all contribute to the authenticity and energy of the wines, making this estate one of the most important contributors to the revival of German wines, especially those from the Rheinhessen region.

Weingut WALLDORF, Saulheim

Maximilian Dexheimer now manages this estate in the heart of Rheinhessen, which was founded by his ancestors at the end of the 19th century. Organic and biodynamic farming practices, manual harvesting, spontaneous fermentation, long vinification, sulphur-free and unfiltered vinification characterize his work. While waiting for his new vintages, we offer a Riesling 2018 which has spent 18 months in 1400-litre casks, whose tension and salinity betrays the estate's limestone soils, and a Pinot Noir 2017 which has been aged for 36 months in barrels of several wines.

MOSELLE

Weingut TROSSEN, Kinheim-Kindel

Return in our portfolio of this pioneer of German natural wine, Rudolf Trossen, who has been managing his vineyards (some of them very old: no grafted vines) planted on the steep slopes of the Moselle valley in bio-dynamic way since 1976! All the vintages of the Purus range are vinified without the addition of sulfites and differ only in the nature of the soil, the exposure of the plots, their acidity, residual sugar and alcoholic degree, the balance being always miraculous. Exceptionally, in 2019, the Madonna cuvée, whose grapes were 100° Oechsle, did not transform all its sugars into alcohol and constitutes a superb dessert wine, the Riesling giving it the indispensable freshness. Purity and depth characterize these wines, which are suitable for harmonious aging.

Jakob TENNSTEDT, Traben-Trarbach

The succession of the veteran Rudolf Trossen is assured, with Jakob Tennstedt! Except that with his one and a half hectares of very old vines with modest yields, he produces only a very limited number of bottles. Their price cannot be low: entirely manual work on 4 terribly sloping plots of land to be rehabilitated, bio-dynamics, very long vinifications 100% natural, all giving magnificent wines of gastronomy - what confirms its 2018, the second vintage of a perfectionist who made his classes with good masters in France, Italy and Austria.

LESOM Jessy Reis & Philipp Musevi

Jessy and Philipp both gave up their professions to study viticulture and oenology in Geisenheim, and then took over some steep vineyards that belonged to Jessy's ancestors. These vineyards are planted with Riesling and are worked without chemicals. The wines are made slowly in an old historical cellar with a minimum of intervention. With labels more reminiscent of sake, a nice range of Moselle rieslings, including a pet nat, and completely artisanal volumes (just over 3000 bottles, divided into 4 cuvées, in 2021)

NAHE

PIRI NATUREL, Christine Pieroth, Burg Layen

Between the Rhine and the Moselle, the Nahe has been an official wine region in its own right since 1971. The "natural" wine did not really exist there until the advent of Christine Pieroth, who took over in 2018 after studies and internships abroad a family estate already listed in 1780. Her lively, straightforward, mineral and elegant wines are enthusiastically received and in high demand. Like Jason Groebe, for example, she favors respect for nature and puts herself at the service, year after year, of the harvest that her work and especially the weather offer her. She has a real talent for reading and interpreting the particularities of the vintage, magnifying it while preserving it.

SAXONY

Weingut Alexandre DUPONT DE LIGONES, Dresde

First of all, a few figures for this estate: latitude 51° N (the same as Flanders and Pas de Calais!); surface area 1.8 hectares; average vine yield 17hl/ha. The wines of our forty-something Saxon Alexandre Dupont de Ligonès therefore have a strong personality. Although he was born in Paris, he did all his studies and most of his training in Germany. He was then given the opportunity to take over the terraced vineyards around Dresden, including the royal Wachwitz vineyard. Since 2016, Alexandre has been making a number of blended cuvées, often long-macerated whites (reminiscent of the best 'orange' wines from Slovenia or Friuli). His work is characterized by entirely manual harvesting, the non-utilization of synthetic fertilizers and phytosanitary products, spontaneous fermentation and very long maturation periods.

WURTEMBERG

Weingut ROTERFADEN, Vaihingen

Ever since they met on the benches of Geisenheim (the Germanic Changins), Olympia Samaras and Hannes Hoffmann dreamed of owning their own vineyard. After internships in France, California and Austria, they realized that the "rehabilitation" of the Hoffmann grandparents' family estate in Württemberg was the most realistic solution. The German-Greek couple switched to biodynamics, gave up the large yields and deliveries of grapes to the local cooperative, built a winery and began to vinify with a minimum of intervention the bunches coming from beautiful steep terroirs, on shell limestone, overlooking the river Enz.

KREMSTAL

Lesehof STAGARD, Stein an der Donau

This estate was already cultivated several centuries ago by Benedictine monks. In 1786, it was acquired by the family of the current owners - which means that 6 generations have succeeded each other in some 230 years. In 2006, the 12 hectares were converted to organic farming. Hand-picking and slow vinification are the rule. The estate, characterized by the variety of exposures and subsoils, as well as the tempering influence of the Danube on the climate, is mainly planted with Riesling (numerous single-vineyard cuvées expressing the miraculous combination of the liveliness of the grape variety, fruit and, for a few of them, a very fine sweetness) and Grüner Veltliner (the emblematic grape variety of Austria, giving wines that are always dry, generally fruity, with spicy and peppery notes, not devoid of minerality).

Herrenhof LAMPRECHT

To the east of Graz, in the volcanic region of Styria, there is another promising estate, also in the hands of young winegrowers who are reviving tradition by working without chemicals on the vines formerly owned by the local abbey, the Domaine Herrenhof Lamprecht. Vines replanted in 2006, a hundred different grape varieties, including the rare Furmint, known for its role in the elaboration of Hungarian tokays. Uncompromisingly organic (the estate has set itself its own charter, prohibiting the use of products, limiting yields and imposing long vinifications).

In the Weinviertel, the country's largest wine-growing region (northeast of Lower Austria), siblings Mathias, Viktoria and Leonhard traveled extensively, from New Zealand to South Africa and from New York to California, before converting the family estate to organic and biodynamic farming and producing an exciting range of handcrafted wines, centered on Grüner Veltliner. Their "In Natura" range, with its unfiltered and extremely low-sulfites wines, was of particular interest to us.

CYCLADES

DOMAINE DE KALATHAS, Tinos

On granite terraces swept by meltem and vines that have not been affected by phylloxera, Jérôme Binda produces surprising wines at the Domaine de Kalathas in the beautiful Cyclade Tinos. Our winegrower works hard and since 2011, he has been perfectly integrated into the island's inhabitants, whose daily concerns he shares. The vines are of a certain age, difficult to specify, as is the identity of some of the native grape varieties. The wines are made in an eminently artisanal manner and any chemistry is naturally prohibited (no added sulphites). With a strong salinity and discreet acidity as a common thread, but which reveals itself over time, the three selected cuvées offer (even more so after decanting) an aromatic palette of great delicacy, complexity and length in the mouth. And so as not to spoil anything, these precious bottles are beautifully dressed.
